

EQ-i2.0 & EQ360 Certifications from eiADVANTAGE

We're big fans of the EQ-i 2.0 assessment and use it widely for our coaching and leadership development programs. It's a powerful tool that's helped so many of our clients grow. It's a trait-based self assessment that measures stable emotional and social characteristics—how people typically think, feel, and behave. Our facilitation includes stories of real-world applications, and how you can position it to develop your coaching business.

Our next certifications: October 19-22 (11-3 ET) or November 23-26 (11-3 ET) each day. Cost: $1850 + gst More info here. ICF CCE Credits: 9.25 Core, 6.75 Resource

Group Coaching Supervision

Supervisor: Lucy Shenouda

The coaches doing the most important work are often the ones with the fewest places to exhale.

Working with people the world has overlooked, and with leaders who move obstacles when others give up, asks everything of us: our presence, our ethics, our very breath. That is why group supervision is an imperative for this work.

It offers a place to bring your toughest cases, think together, and remember you are not alone. A place to breathe deeply, reflect honestly, and stay grounded in what matters most.

This Spring, I'm opening a small, intimate group supervision circle for coaches committed to social impact. The group is reflective, generative, and supportive, with space for traumainformed practice, ethics, and the kinds of complex questions this work so often brings.

Timing: 4th Thursday, 11am–1pm ET, every 2 months, on Zoom

Sessions: Oct 29 & Dec 10, 2026

Feb 25, Apr 29 & Jun 24, 2027

Bring a friend who also registers, and both receive a complementary 1:1 supervision session. Only a few spots remain.

If this resonates, I'd love to hear from you! lucy@fosteressence.ca

A Thoughtful Beginning to 2026: Register for the Spring Cohort of Coaching

Neurodiversity at Work | Submitted by: Deborah Shukyn-Plageman, Founder,

PersonaGrata Consulting, Coaching Neurodiversity at Work

The new year often invites a different kind of orientation — less about acceleration, more about intention.

If part of what you are holding this year is a desire to coach or lead with greater awareness of neurodiversity at work, we invite you to consider the spring offering of Coaching Neurodiversity at Work (CNDW) through the University of British Columbia Extended Learning.

CNDW is a comprehensive, neuro-affirmative coach training program architected and led by Deborah Shukyn-Plageman, M.Ed., PCC, ESIA, EIA, CCDP. The course has been awarded the maximum 40 Continuing Coach Education Units (CCEUs) by the International Coaching Federation:

• 26 Core Competencies

• 14 Resource Development

This recognition reflects the depth, rigour, and ethical grounding of a program designed to support coaches and leaders working in complex, human systems.

What past participants want you to know

“This course transformed how I coach and how I think about coaching… about the critical nature of trust and relationship and container setting.”

“This course has equipped me with a greater understanding of neurodiversity and neurodivergence both from a knowledge point of view but equally, and maybe more importantly, with a justice and equity lens.”

Across cohorts, participants describe CNDW not as a checklist of tools, but as learning and unlearning — work that reshapes how we understand context, difference, power, and responsibility in our professional roles. Join us this spring

Registration is now open for the spring cohort of Coaching Neurodiversity at Work. You are also warmly invited to view the recording of or attend the live spring information session, where you can learn more about the course design, pacing, and who this learning is — and is not — intended for.

If you are seeking professional development that honours complexity, centres dignity, and supports you to work more ethically and effectively with the people already in front of you, this may be the right time to step in. We look forward to welcoming the next learning community this spring!

The Inclusive Leadership Coaching Podcast | Submitted by: Terri Donohue

What might it look like if your coaching practice embraced more inclusivity?

In a world that's constantly evolving, it's crucial for us as coaches to be intentional about the impact we create. We have an incredible opportunity to lead the way in building a future where inclusivity is not just an idea, but a reality.

Welcome to The Inclusive Leadership Coaching Podcast—I'm your host, Terri Donohue, your Neurospicy Inclusion Coach! As an ICF/PCC life and leadership coach with a passion for social justice and a specialization in neurodiversity, my mission is to support fellow coaches in building practices that reflect equity, authenticity, and real, lasting change.

In this podcast, we'll explore how leadership is more than just a title—it's about behavior, collaboration, and creating impactful, sustainable change. Whether you're at the beginning of your inclusivity journey or have already made strides, this podcast will offer tools, reflections, and inspiring conversations to help you deepen and grow your practice.

The Inclusive Leadership Coaching Podcast bridges the gap between coaching, inclusion, and leadership—finally!

Episodes drop bi-weekly on Wednesdays. You can also connect with me on LinkedIn for updates, bonus content, and opportunities to collaborate.

A Creative Home Base for Coaches & Creatives (Downtown Toronto)

If you've been trying to design courses, write your book, or film your content from the corner of your kitchen table...this is for you.

The Communiverse started as a project, based on Dr. Kenneth Gergen's social constructionist concept. Now it is taking on a physical form as a small, coaching-centred creative studio (950 sq ft) in downtown Toronto (near Wellesley & Yonge), hosted by the Canadian Centre for Brief Coaching. We're opening our doors to a founding circle of 20 members from the coaching and creative community.

What you get as a member:

For a founding rate starting at $500/month + HST, you'll have:

• Access during office hours (Mon–Fri, approx. 9–5) | Use the space as your "office away from home" with shared, hot-desk style seating (first-come, first-served)

• Neurodivergent-friendly environment | No scent, Low-noise zones, intentional lighting, and quiet times designed for deep focus and gentle, steady energy.

• Private Consultation rooms (by booking) | For client sessions, supervision, or small meetings, with fair use booking so everyone gets a turn

• Professional downtown business / mailing address | A real downtown office address at a price that's almost unheard of.

• Training & event space at member rates | Priority access to a room for up to ~25 people for workshops, cohorts, and small events (booked and billed separately).

• Creative community | Be surrounded by other coaches, writers, facilitators, and artists who are making things—not just talking about them.

This is a creative studio, not a generic co-working office We gently ask: please don't bring your bookkeeping or inbox-clearing here. This is for curriculum design, content creation, writing, vision-boarding, and big-thinking work. Studio Saturdays – Make Your Ideas Visible In partnership with Bayview Centre for the Arts, we offer Studio Saturdays as a separate, fee-based service.

• Professional-quality recording studio setup

• Videographer/artist with expertise in documentary & online learning

• Optional add-ons like mentoring or content-shaping support

Members receive priority booking and preferred rates. Flexibility & bonus

• Beyond 9–5?

Use of the space outside office hours can be pre-arranged to accommodate your needs.

• Different ways to belong

Membership starts at $500/month (dedicated hours each week); options for more frequent or dedicated use are available at higher tiers.

Founding bonus: Sign up for a 2026 membership in November, and you get December as a trial month to set up, plan, and quietly prepare your 2026 projects—plus an end-of-year office party with fellow Communiverse creatives. Only 20 memberships available 📩 Apply to join The Communiverse - If you have questions, please let us know!

CONFLICT MANAGEMENT COACHING WORKSHOP (VIRTUAL) by CINERGY® Coaching through Resolution Pathways

Submitted by: Sharad Kerur

Conflict management coaching is a specialized area within coaching, where coaches support clients to prevent unnecessary conflicts, manage existing disputes, and improve their conflict resolution skills. This workshop will provide participants with:

• An understanding of the CINERGY® model of conflict management coaching, including its theory, principles, and methods.

• Basic knowledge of how to use the CINERGY® model in conflict coaching.

• Insight into the skills needed to be an effective conflict management coach.

• Practical experience with the coaching model in the roles of coach, client, and observer.

• Awareness of how and when to apply this coaching technique.

• Resources and guidelines for the logistics of conflict management coaching.

Participants who attend the full program earn up to 34 ICF credits. More information can be found at: https://resolutionpathways.com/cinergy-workshop or contact Sharad Kerur at: sharadkerur@resolutionpathways.com

*A discount of $300 is offered to members of ICF and ICF CCEUs who complete this workshop. Group Mentor Coaching (All levels) With Cathy Shaughne
